The Making of

LUVILLE®

COLLECTABLES

The whole Luville collection is created by our special design team who are all specialised in developing a specific part of the Luville collection.

Before the design department starts developing, a detailed village plan is made in which the whole atmosphere and the specific details are written down. Also ideas from our customers and our people are integrated in this plan.

Then our designers start creating and making 3D models on the computer so the houses and figurines can be seen in every dimension. With an eye for detail every collectable is made with the highest precision and care.

After this the buildings and accessories are baked for several hours at high temperatures. Then each building and accessory is painted by hand by our painters in beautiful authentic colours.

When finished all the items are double-checked so the outstanding quality of the Luville collectables can be guaranteed for more than 100%

After a strict screening only the best items remain. Our team of sculptors then start creating the buildings and figurines which are all handmade. Each piece is molded by hand, with several different molds needed for the different parts that make up a building or accessory.

Molendam

In Molendam, Father Christmas and Jack Frost are happy friends. The canals are frozen over, traditional ships are stuck in the ice. When the sky is dark at five o'clock, clog maker Willem Geurts lights the great bonfires on the quay, making short work of the day's wood chips. The light of the bonfire dances on the ice, just like Froukje van Tilborgh of the grocery shop. Her sons join in on their little wooden skates as Mayor Van der Kolk makes deft figures of eight on his Friesian flat-skates. Baker Aad Brakenhoff's twins Henkie and Lieke hold their balance with a chair, learning how to skate. His wife Bertha's domain is the 'cake and drinks' stand, selling hot Christmas waffles and gin. This is also the place where the Molendam residents meet. They keep warm with thick gloves and stories of the old days, about Molendam, the polder, the water. The stories that give the Molendam residents their own place in the history of the town, following the tracks left in the creaking snow by the generations before them.

Bridbury

Villagers, chins tucked deep into their collars, are hurrying to "father" Jessy Green's midnight mass. The smell of freshly baked Christmas stollen from Pete Hammersmith's bakery, and warm wine fill the streets of Bridbury. A warm light illuminates the last glittering remains of snow and the childrens' choir from the "St. Joseph Primary School" is already to be heard in the distance. The strong Christmas beer is being served in Bobby Taylor's pub. It 's time to tighten the bonds of friendship by sharing a meal at restaurant "Eating Time". Time to tell stories by the open hearth in the "Bridbury Inn" hotel. Bridbury's stories, which give the inhabitants a place of their own in history and which leave tracks in the snow following in the footsteps of generations before.

ChateauVille

SUR MER

In the “Eglise Sainte Véronique” in ChateauVille sur mer Padre Henry Thiory is just starting the midnight mass accompanied by the clear tones of the childrens’ choir, while lighthouse keeper Jacques Le Perray watches over the town. The crib has never been so beautiful, and artist Gérard Potoise has once again painted a stunning décor. The snowy night is darker than ever. The fishing boat in the harbour, belonging to the Avernoes brothers, creaks in the ice, and even André Draveil’s water mill has come to a standstill because the stream has frozen over. In hotel “Chez Gérardine” preparations are underway for the Christmas dinner. Then stories will be retold. ChateauVille sur mer’s stories, which give the inhabitants a place of their own in history and which leave tracks in the snow following in the footsteps of generations before them.

Schneewald

Bathing in the light from the oil lamps in the churchyard, "Pfarrer" Victor Konrad is just starting the midnight mass. Not only the villagers in their thick coats, not only the farming family Neuendorf and the woodworkers "Wilhelmus der Förster" and Marty Friedenau, but also dozens of skiers from Annemarie Britz's hotel have abandoned the après ski for one evening in favour of the Christmas mass. Thick snowflakes are falling onto the abandoned pistes and the anchor lift is swinging in the wind.

Tomorrow, in café/restaurant "Stab Aldo" there is to be a great Christmas banquet with as main course a roe shot by Bernhard Blumberg himself. Then stories will be retold. Schneewald's stories, which give the inhabitants a place of their own in history and which leave tracks in the snow following in the footsteps of generations before them.

Detail of Chareauville

Ville de Reidy

With chins tucked deep in their collars, the inhabitants of Ville de Reidy are walking through the crisp snow to the church, where padre Hanz Herbolz is ready to celebrate midnight mass. The big farming family Forbach is seated in the front pews. Despite the cold, the delightful smell of the traditional “pain d’épices” is wafting out of the open windows of Clement Felbach’s bakery. This very night these will be eaten, after the mass, in every house in the village. And tomorrow, when the skiers have returned to the piste, the best “Gewürztraminer” from wine shop “In Vino Veritas” will be uncorked and the entire village will draw up a chair in restaurant “Chez Gwendoline” for the satisfying Christmas meal. Then stories will be retold. Ville de Reidy’s stories, which give the inhabitants a place of their own in history and which leave tracks in the snow following in the footsteps of generations before them.
